

Vidyo for College Prep

What are Your Needs?

- Would your high school juniors and seniors benefit from taking college level courses?
- Do you need to improve your ACT and SAT prep courses?
- Are your students able to physically visit college campuses? If not, would you like to offer them exposure to multiple college campuses?
- Do your students and their parents need helpful information on financial aid opportunities?

The transition from high school to college is a significant endeavor for students. With more choices for higher education today than ever before, students need access to advisors and relevant information to help them select the right school and program of study. An effective college prep program connects students with educators and coursework to ensure a successful transition.

The Vidyo Solution

The need to expose students to many different higher education options

Students can transition to college studies by taking dual credit courses while still high school. They can participate remotely in professor-led courses taught on college campuses via Vidyo. Not only will students feel confident that they can handle the workload in college, but they will have fewer credit hours to pay for after high school graduation.

The need to help students and families understand financial aid options

Students and their parents can participate in financial aid workshops over Vidyo. Sessions can be recorded and provided on-demand to parents who are not able to attend live sessions.

The need to introduce students to college-level coursework in a supportive environment

High school counselors can use Vidyo to offer convenient ACT and SAT prep courses to students across a district. Students and instructors can meet virtually over Vidyo, saving time and increasing the frequency of study group meetings. Study groups can grow into mentoring and leadership development groups.

The need to provide prospective students with information on college and university admissions and programs of study

Colleges and universities can broadly disseminate up-to-date information to multiple students and schools at any given time over Vidyo. High school candidates can meet with enrolled college students and participate with recruitment officers in entrance interviews from the convenience of their own high schools.
